

University Tourism and Leisure Foundation

(Fundació Universitària de Turisme i Lleure)

Scientific rigour and experience

The objective of UAB Fundació Universitària de Turisme i Lleure is to stimulate and support the teaching and research activities related to tourism, sport and culture in Spain. In this far-reaching project, the interests of society, tourism companies and the academic world converge.

Appropriate study programmes

UAB's contribution to the Foundation takes the form of academic quality and the experience of EUTDH to the Foundation, in the fields of teaching, research and the application of acquired knowledge in real-life situations, through CINERT – the research centre – and ARC – the consultancy unit – together with the professional programme, student practical experience at both national and international level, and further and post-graduate education opportunities.

The Foundation's Board of Patrons, in addition to its regular functions, plays the role of academic counsel to EUTDH. It is therefore a focus for debating educational strategies, future programmes – their underlying objective and contents – in a constant endeavour to maintain our innovatory and benchmark status.

Relations between the university, the business sector and society

The Foundation's aim is to be a creative and dynamic organisation, capable of achieving maximum effectiveness through the synergies of the relations between its three pillars – university, tourism companies and society – for the ultimate benefit of a sector which has undoubtedly constituted Spain's economic motor. EUTDH is not satisfied to restrict its interests to a national scope, but rather outreaches to establish worldwide links with business groups and other higher education centres in the field of tourism and leisure.
